In view of these factors there is presently no need to modify the scheme.

(c) The Indian Customs Tarrif Act already empowers the Government to impose anti-dumping duties in those cases in which dumped imports are found to be causing material injury to the domestic industry. Before such a duty can be imposed, an authority designated by Government has to make a finding on the existence of dumping and injury, and a causal link between the two. The Designated Authority is normally required to initiate an investigation only upon receipt of a written request, supported by evidence of dumping, injury, and a causal link between such dumped imports and the alleged injury, by or on behalf of the affected domestic industry. Government has since put in place the necessary arrangements to investigate and redress cases of injurious dumping.
